

Travel > Hotels

Newspaper offices reimagined as hotels: From rooms inspired by 1920s writers' offices to printing presses

The Big Six

CHLOË HAMILTON | Friday 15 May 2015

Press Hotel Portland, Maine

Deadline day has arrived for the Press Hotel in Portland, Maine. It opened on Wednesday in the former headquarters of the Portland Press Herald newspaper, with rooms inspired by 1920s writers' offices, each featuring a vintage desk and leather writer's chair. Sneaky newsroom references are dotted throughout, including the famous pangram "the quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog" printed on a leather chair.

The Press Hotel, 119 Exchange St, Portland, Maine, US (001 207 653 9990; thepresshotel.com). Doubles from $206 (£134), room-only.